I were reading about negative progression systems for betting on 50/50 games and why they are doomed to fail (Martingale, Labouchere and D'Alembert system). Let's say your starting funds are $100 euros and do $100 bets in a row fo llowing my system.

Dependent on the risk factor (percentage of your funds you are willin) Tj T* BT

What you can see is that for low risk factors you will never be totally broke b ut the room for gains is small.

For higher risk factors that chance is 5%-30%.

What surprised me is that the average funds at the end are always around 100.

Is there some kind of theorem that forbids this to happen and is winning 50/50 games on the long run just impossible? Has anyone tried to make their own system and what result do you get? Thanks in advance!

A massive FanDuel sign hangs overhead and the surrounding logos ensure it's Tables for four occupy a large chunk of the best viewing spots.

You can munch on food from S&S while relaxing in them or snag eats from one of the other restaurants in the casino.

If there's football on, come early.

There are also banks of slot machines by the S&S entrance if you're fee ling lucky.

There are also dedicated lines for big spenders (over $1,000).

Last month, the FanDuel Sportsbook took in $10.

9 million of sports bets.
