The sports betting winnings are taxed like other ordinary income, so it is important to tell your tax professional about both your winnings and losses. Most taxpayers can only deduct their sports betting losses to the extent of their sports betting and gambling winnings.

Taxpayers who take the standard deduction are generally unable to deduct their sports betting losses.

Failing to report your sports betting winnings could result in an audit of your tax return, assessment of penalties and interest, and even criminal charges in the most severe cases.

When a sportsbook or gambling company sends you a tax form, it also sends a tax form to the IRS.

If you do not include that tax form on your return, the IRS is likely to take notice.

Also, some states may not allow a taxpayer to deduct gambling losses to offset gambling winnings.

This is due to a Random Number Generator contained within the game's software.

This software cycles through millions of numbers continuously.

The outcome of a spin is automatically determined by the RNG at the time you hit the spin button, making it impossible to predict in advance whether you'll win or lose.

The same random odds apply equally for each spin.

Some symbols may seem to show up only occasionally on the reel, while other symbols may appear frequently or more often.

All Online Slots games have a virtual reel that determines whether you win or not.

Not all games play the same.
