This NFL game was the final game of the season, and there was no clear favorite

Since both numbers behind the plus and minus signs were close to 100, you could tell that both teams were a close match for each other.

To show this in practice, we'll take an NBA game between the Los Angeles Lakers and the Golden State Warriors.

In moneyline betting, two terms are prevalent: a bet can be straight up, or you can make a straight bet.

If not, the gamblers who bet the point spread on the Spurs would win.

Of course, when the point spread is taken into account, the favorite and the underdog will each have close to a 50% chance of covering the spread.

Let's say you place a wager of $100.

It's one thing to have success predicting two or three matches, but to try to predict four out of four (or more) is quite a longshot.
