The team in the Underdog role is getting points, which is represented by the plus (+) symbol that you wouldn't see on the board but would be represented next to team on your betting ticket or slip.

Winner takes it.

The key to wagering successfully in college football spread betting is to decide early how many points you're willing to lay with Favorites and to get in at the lowest possible spot.

The skill in this often requires you to forecast how a game will be wagered since we often see opening lines bet up over the course of the week due to the majority of the money coming in on the favorite.

Let's look at an example.
