The most common betting option for games in World Cup group play is referred to as "three-way" betting.

You can bet on either team to win, or you can bet that the match will be a draw

If you're used to betting point spreads in football and basketball, it takes a bit of a mental leap to adjust.

Let's start with an easy example:- Team A plus 125.- Team B plus 265.- Draw plus 195.

All those options express payoffs for a $100 bet.

You can bet $100 to win $125 on Team A, $100 to win $265 on Team B or $100 to win $195 that the game will end in a tie.

Easy to deduce that Team A is the superior team.

Not only does that side offer the shortest return, but a tie is even more likely than Team B winning.
